ABOUT THIS CATALOGUE

The books in this catalogue are from the private library of The Hon. David Levine AO RFD QC—a dedicated and passionate bibliophile for more than half a century. Most of the items bear David's bookplate or militaria book label, usually affixed to the upper pastedown or upper free endpaper.

This is the second of a series of catalogues devoted to the Levine collection of military histories. It will be followed by catalogues of the Franco-Prussian and Russo-Japanese wars.

The catalogue has been compiled using the sequence of entries in Victor Sutcliffe's Regiments of the British Army. A handbook with Lists. Parts 1 and 2, along with reference to Arthur S. White's A bibliography of regimental histories of the British Army. I am grateful to Major General (Ret'd) Michael O'Brien, CSC, MDA, BSc (Mil), for his guidance in compiling this catalogue. All errors of interpretation and placement are entirely my own.

Goschen, Captain George W. Treble, Captain W. Price, Capt. R. Eaton White, Capt. J. Barrett-Lennard, Capt. F. Labouchere, Lieut.-Col. Wilfred J. Whitehead, amongst others. From Wikipedia: 'On 13 December 1867 a bomb exploded outside Middlesex House of Detention, Clerkenwell. It was an attempt to rescue two members of Irish Republican Brotherhood (IRB) detained there awaiting trial. The Government's response was to raise special constables to protect London buildings against future "Fenian outrages". The GPO special constables had been supervised and trained by Major J.L. du Plat Taylor (and Civil Service Rifles' NCOs). After the crisis was over the GPO special constables approached du Plat Taylor to request that they be formed into a Rifle Volunteer unit. Du Plat Taylor, who was the Private Secretary to the Postmaster General, sought permission from the Postmaster General and the War Office to form such a unit. Permission was granted and on 2 March 1868 the 49th Middlesex Rifle Volunteers Corps (Post Office Rifles) was duly raised from the Post Office Companies (Civil Service Rifles) and the special constables all of whom were GPO servants. Du Plat Taylor became its first commanding officer.' $500
